

Future trade deals with Colombia/Peru and Central America to boost EU business

EUROCHAMBRES and BUSINESSEUROPE welcome the signing of the EU-Colombia/Peru Free Trade Agreement (FTA) on 26 June in Brussels and look forward to the signing of the EU-Central America FTA due on 29 June. EU business now calls on the European Parliament to ratify these agreements as soon as possible.

EU business that will particularly benefit from the deal include: telecommunications, construction, distribution, financial and transport services as well as textiles, chemicals and the wine and spirits sectors. Not only will these and other sectors see a reduction in tariffs, but additional benefits will come from a reduction in behind-the-border obstacles and the creation of a more favourable business environment.

Arnaldo Abruzzini, Secretary General of EUROCHAMBRES, said: “With the signing of the EU-Colombia/Peru and EU–Central America FTA, we see an important part of the ambitious EU Latin America trade negotiation agenda move towards completion and we certainly welcome the opportunities this creates for EU businesses. However if we want to reap the full benefits we must now focus on the implementation and enforcement of these and other trade agreements. Chambers stand ready to play an active role in this regard.”

The Director General of BUSINESSEUROPE, Philippe de Buck, commented: “Colombia/Peru and the Central American countries are markets with great potential. The European business community welcomes the signing of these two free trade agreements and hopes for quick ratification. All parties will see important benefits from this agreement which extend beyond simple tariff reductions to wider trade and non-tariff barriers that will lead to more investment.”

Background

Colombia and Peru are important growth markets for the EU, with total trade in goods between the two regions increasing by around 60% between 2009-2011. EU total trade in goods with Central America has increased by around 50% between 2009-2011. This FTA will further encourage trade and investment in the Latin American region and serve as an example of the benefits of trade liberalisation.

The European Parliament will vote on the agreements later this year and it is expected that MEPs will give their approval. Once this happens, the FTAs can enter into provisional application, pending ratification in Colombia, Peru and Central America. EU Member States will ratify in their national parliaments over the coming years.
